Angus Book Award leads the way
Welcome to the second edition of Angus Council’s residents’ magazine. I hope you find it as informative and readable as the first.

Winter is now well and truly upon us and while the frosty weather brings a special kind of beauty to the Angus countryside, for many people this is a challenging time of year. Among them are drivers and pedestrians for whom getting to and from their destinations is a major concern when the temperatures plummet.

In this edition of Angus Life, we look at the sterling work done by our winter maintenance team to keep the county moving during chilly weather.

As the temperature drops, so the thermostats in our homes rise – along with the heating bills.

Our special feature on energy management gives some timely tips on how to reduce your heating costs while protecting the environment.

Looking ahead to next year, like many people in Angus, I am excited by the prospect of the return of The Open Golf Championship to Carnoustie.

The influx of visitors to the county and the worldwide broadcast coverage give us a unique opportunity to shout about our wonderful county and what it has to offer. Local people are already getting ready to act as ambassadors for Angus during the event and in this edition, we give information on how you can become involved.

These are just a flavour of the many articles in this edition of Angus Life. I hope you enjoy reading it and may I wish you and yours a very merry Christmas and happy New Year when it comes.

Winter 2006
Santa and his helpers are ready to light up Angus

THE countdown is on for the big Christmas lights switch on across Angus. The year-long preparations will culminate with Angus Provost Bill Middleton throwing the switch in Forfar, and there will be special visits from Santa Claus himself doing the honours in the other towns.

Christmas lighting is a community-led project and the council has been in discussion with various community groups within the seven burgh towns to finalise this year’s displays.

The Christmas lighting displays and switch-on events are organised by local groups such as community councils,rotaries and business associations.

In Brechin, Carnoustie and Monifieth, there are special Christmas lighting groups whose membership is made up from of a variety of these individual organisations.

New features are funded by the communities through fundraising events held during the year with matched funding provided by the council.

The installation, removal, maintenance, storage, electricity usage, test and repair of displays is fully funded by Angus Council. Last year, the cost for Christmas lighting displays was over £150,000. This year, the whole scheme was subject to competitive tender with a private company undertaking the works.

The Christmas lighting will involve:
- eight 10m-high trees
- 194 features mounted on street lighting columns
- 47 cross-street features
- 22 wall-mounted features
- 232m of icicle and curtain light features
- 46 wall-mounted mini trees
- 1817m of festoon lighting with thousands of individual lamps.

The switch-on ceremonies are held on different evenings to help Santa (and his council helpers) to get to the various events.

For more information on Angus Christmas lights, check your local press nearer the dates.

This year’s switch-on dates are:
- Forfar 23/11/06
- Arbroath 24/11/06
- Monifieth 29/11/06 – 6.30pm
- Brechin 30/11/06
- Carnoustie 01/12/06
- Kirriemuir 02/12/06
- Montrose 07/12/06
- Other times to be announced – see your local press.

Ensuring equality

NEW disability legislation takes effect from December requiring the education authority to actively support equality of opportunity for people with disabilities.

The council is inviting volunteers who are themselves disabled pupils or ex-pupils, parents or carers of disabled pupils or carers of current, previous or future pupils to assist in creating an education disability equality scheme.

If you would like to be involved in this process please contact Frances Watt on 01307 473335.

Improvements are top priority

MONIFIETH Area Partnership is concentrating on three priorities – town centre redevelopment/community hall, improved rural transport links and improved sports and leisure facilities.

The Monifieth Health Improvement sub-group has been working with community groups to develop a survey regarding health issues/needs to go to every household in Monifieth via the spring edition of Monifieth Matters.

For more information, contact Beverley Gibb on 01307 473787 or e-mail gibbj@angus.gov.uk

Revamp for seafront

AT its last meeting, the Carnoustie Partnership heard about proposals for public consultation on the seafront developments in the burgh.

The consultation will run until 24 November and consists of two surveys – one aimed at young people and the other for adults. It is envisaged that the seafront developments will be completed by spring 2008.

Following the success of last year’s Christmas Cracker event, this year’s is planned for Sunday 10 December at Carnoustie High School.

For information and dates of meetings, contact Beverley Gibb on 01307 473787 or e-mail gibbj@angus.gov.uk

The white ribbon of support

ANGUS men are being urged to wear a white ribbon as a symbol of their opposition to violence against women.

Statistics show that during 2005/06, 729 incidents of domestic abuse were reported to local police.

This year, the Angus Partnership on Domestic Abuse is supporting the White Ribbon campaign and men holding prominent positions, including Angus Provost Bill Middleton, have pledged their support.

The key message of the campaign is that violence against women is also a men’s issue. Ribbons are available from police stations, libraries, Access and housing offices, health centres, sports centres and schools from 25 November.
A different way of teaching which promises great results and develops pupils’ social skills is to be rolled out across Angus schools.

A lesson in learning...

Many of Angus Council’s teachers have now been trained in co-operative learning – an exciting way of teaching and involving pupils in the learning process.

Co-operative learning has been used around the world for thousands of years and research has shown how effective it is.

What it means is that pupils are put in groups to learn together and, crucially, from each other. The members of the group are responsible for each other’s learning and so must help each other develop skills and knowledge.

So how does this work on a practical level? Traditional methods of teaching can involve the teacher delivering information to the pupils, whereas in co-operative learning, groups of pupils might split a text between them, identify the key points and teach each other. It gives a greater variety of learning activities in the classroom.

To find out what pupils have learned from a lesson, the teacher could then ask specific pupils to respond to questions and it would be up to the group to make sure that any of its members could answer.

Angus Council is working with North Lanarkshire Council, as this local authority has considerable experience of using co-operative learning.

North Lanarkshire and Angus teachers will be able to share experiences, learn from each other and showcase good examples through the internet.

Peter Duguid, the council’s principal quality improvement officer for education, said: “As well as being a good way of getting pupils involved in learning, co-operative learning emphasises the development of social skills.

“Angus teachers who have been trained in it have been very enthusiastic and we will be training all of our teachers, including those in adult education, in this way of working over the next few years.”

Innovative projects give pupils a head start in life

MEETING the needs of all learners is an important part of the education department’s job. Angus schools work with other organisations to come up with creative ways of giving pupils strong employability skills.

The council has teamed up with Angus College to give senior pupils the chance to study Higher psychology, as this can’t be offered in schools.

In addition, S3 and S4 pupils can now follow vocational programmes while at school, such as skills for work courses in construction, hairdressing and rural skills. They are also able to access SQA and City & Guilds accredited courses in sport and leisure, early education, childcare and motor vehicle maintenance.

Five Angus schools are offering S3 and S4 pupils the ‘xlerate with xi’ course, in partnership with the Prince’s Trust.

This targets pupils who are at risk of leaving school without the prospects of a job, training or further education to go on to, and supports the development of personal, interpersonal and team skills in preparation for the world of work.

Work experience placements are available to all S4 pupils, but the council has been working with Angus College and local employers to extend this option for S5 pupils who plan to leave school at Christmas.

Working with the charity ENABLE, the council also identifies suitable work experience placements for young people with disabilities and additional support needs.

Computer giant helps teachers share ideas

The global software company Microsoft has invested in Scotland’s education to fund the Innovative Teacher Project which links up teachers throughout Scotland so they can pass on good ideas to each other. They will be able to pass on ideas through a dedicated website within the national Scottish Schools Virtual Network called GLOW.
Caring for the carers

There are many unsung heroes looking after elderly or sick relatives or children with disabilities in often demanding circumstances. Respite care offers them a welcome break.

Studies have shown that people who care for others often have increased levels of stress, ill health and mental health problems – and that is why Angus Council provides a number of services to help carers take some time out for themselves.

This is called respite care and the council’s social services provides both short-term and longer-term respite care.

In April 2006, the home care service launched the ‘Short Breaks Scheme’, which allows carers to take a few hours off each day to either have a break or allow them attend part-time college courses.

Respite care is available to anyone who has a caring role for a relative or friend with a physical or learning disability, a mental health problem or is older and frail.

Phillip Gillespie, service manager of Social Work and Health, explained: “Many people are referred to us from a range of sources, including their GPs, district nurses or hospital staff, but some do self-refer because of the growing strains of looking after people.

“When we get a request for respite care, we assess the needs of the carer under NHS legislation.

“Through this assessment, we develop a care plan for the person being looked after, but also – and just as importantly – for the carer themselves.

“We recognise the importance of the work they do and the need to make sure they look after their own wellbeing.”

The Short Breaks Scheme is ideal for a few hours’ break, but the council also has four residential units where longer periods of respite care can be provided.

If the person being cared for has more complex medical needs, then private nursing homes can be organised.

A growing issue in recent years has been the increase of dementia in the elderly, which puts a considerable strain on carers because of the level of dependency of the person they care for.

“We are working in partnership with Alzheimer’s Scotland to support people who have early stage dementia.

“This is a critical stage for both the sufferer and the carer so we need to give them information and support,” said Phillip.

For children, respite may form part of the care plan and this would be agreed following an assessment.

For children with disabilities, overnight respite can be provided either in the form of specialist respite foster carers or at Strathmore Centre in Forfar. For children whose parent have problems, for example with mental health issues or substance misuse, again overnight respite can be offered from trained foster carers, or for part of a day from community childminders.

“All of these respite breaks allow parents to recharge their batteries, as well as giving their children positive experiences,” explained Peter Pope, service manager for children.

The benefits are obvious: “Even to get a few hours off during the day to go shopping or have a coffee with friends is fantastic,” said a carer who looks after her husband.

“It can be lonely and stressful caring for someone 24/7, but small breaks are a great way of getting out for a while and, quite frankly, doing something for myself. I believe it helps me get a better perspective on my life.”

Could you help?

“When it works well, it’s a very good thing,” said Peter Pope, service manager for children, talking about the experiences of carers who have volunteered to provide respite care for children.

“Everybody benefits. Carers get a real sense of achievement, the parents get a welcome break, the kids have a good time and their siblings get more attention thanks to the respite break,” he added.

If you would be interested in volunteering as a carer and would like to find out what’s involved, call 01307 461767 for an informal chat.

Seeking your views on access

ANGUS Council is seeking the views of people who enjoy the great outdoors, or who own or manage land.

Drop-in sessions have been organised as an informal opportunity for people to discuss local paths and access issues with council staff.

The sessions are being held at the following venues over the coming months:
- Friockheim Church Hall – Tuesday 21 November
- Edzell Inglis Memorial Hall – Tuesday 28 November
- Forfar Town & County Hall – Wednesday 6 December
- Arbroath Old & Abbey Church Hall – Tuesday 12 December

Council staff will be at each venue from 1.30pm to 7.30pm. Questionnaires are also available from libraries and Access Offices.

For more details, call Paul Clark, countryside access officer, on 01307 473589.

PRIVATE landlords urged to register

PRIVATE landlords in Angus are reminded that they must now be registered with their local authority.

Landlords who have not registered could be committing a criminal offence and be fined up to £5000.

The requirement will help local authorities to remove disreputable landlords from the market and protect tenants and their neighbours from the impact of antisocial behaviour and mismanaged property on the wider community.

Further information is available from the council’s private landlord registration officer on 01575 570353.

They are the champions!

THE Open Championship will be held at Carnoustie Links from 19 to 22 July 2007 – the seventh time the course has played host to the event.

Carnoustie, much regarded as the most demanding course on The Open rota, has previously seen triumphs by Tommy Armour, Henry Cotton, Ben Hogan, Gary Player, Tom Watson and, most recently, Paul Lawrie in 1999.

In 1999, Carnoustie was the scene of some of the most memorable and gripping Opens ever, with Jean van der Velde leading most of the way, only to end up paddling in the Barry Burn when he dropped his shot on to the final green.
opportunities for marketing and business development.

David Valentine, chair of the East of Scotland Golf Alliance, said: "The return of The Open to Carnoustie in 2007 offers a great opportunity for the whole of Angus to showcase our world-class golf product and superb attractions before, during and after the event."

"To maximise the economic spin-offs from the event, businesses need to be prepared. There will be thousands of visitors to the county, looking for somewhere to shop, eat and have a drink. Now is the time for us to be thinking about how we meet that demand."

In order to accommodate the vast number of visitors, VisitScotland’s Angus & Dundee network office is encouraging local people to provide temporary accommodation for the run-up and duration of The Open. Patrick O’Shaughnessy, VisitScotland Angus and Dundee area director, said: "This is an excellent opportunity for Angus and Dundee to be highlighted as a quality holiday destination with golf at the forefront of our tourism product."

"We want to be able to offer everyone accommodation that fits all budgets and gives visitors the opportunity to stay close to the action, but also have the opportunity to explore other parts of the region."

Local residents interested in providing B&B can pick up a registration form from any of the tourist information centres in the Angus and Dundee area.

For whole property lets, Blackadders have been appointed The R&A’s official letting agents to manage the provision of private accommodation for players, officials, exhibitors and visitors.

To find out more about letting your property during the event, visit the website on www.open2007.com.

"The people of the town are looking forward to the event and the various agencies are already hard at work to make Carnoustie look its best for the occasion," said Ed Oswald, joint chair of the Carnoustie Partnership.

"Many people have already decided to let out their homes and hopefully many more will come forward, while others are offering B&B during The Open period. One thing we can guarantee is that thousands of visitors to the town will receive a warm Carnoustie welcome."

The Partnership will take a lead role in exploring the benefits to the town of the return of The Open at its monthly meetings.

Sue McMahon, who shares the chair with Ed, added: "Why not come along to a meeting of the partnership with your ideas on how the town can make the best of The Open?"

For details, contact Sue on suemcmahon88@hotmail.com or 01241 852549 or Ed on eandhoswald@tiscali.co.uk.

CARNoustie is set to be a hive of activity as the town gets a £1.5m revamp for next year’s Open and beyond.

To ensure the town looks its best as it takes centre stage worldwide, a number of image enhancement projects will take place before next summer.

The main elements of this work will be the erection of 16 new eye-catching, 8.5m high banners around the town with graphics promoting the many attractions of Angus.

These colourful additions to the town will be complemented with a number of landscaping and environmental improvements at locations near or en route to the Championship Golf Course.
Green Christmas

The council has announced details of when recycled rubbish will be collected over the festive period.

With so much extra waste expected to be generated during Christmas and New Year, residents are urged to recycle as much as possible.

Morag Grant, recycling officer for Angus Council, said: “People in Angus are already enthusiastic about recycling, but as more waste is produced during the festive period, it is a good time encourage people to recycle.”

The weekly kerbside collection of the small green recycling boxes – for glass bottles, cans, papers and plastics – will run as normal over the festive period. “The extra plastic bottles and cans that tend to build up at that time of year can be put in carrier bags beside the box,” explained Morag.

Manned recycling centres in Arbroath, Brechin, Carnoustie, Forfar, Kirriemuir, Monifieth and Montrose will be open as usual from 8.15am to 5pm, except on 25 and 26 December and 1 and 2 January.

The various neighbourhood recycling points and glass banks in Angus will be serviced as normal. However, the fortnightly kerbside collection of green compost bins will be suspended from 25 December to 8 January.

Christmas trees can be taken to recycling centres or placed next to green compost bins for uplifting in early January.

Christmas cards can also be recycled at the manned centres. Unfortunately, wrapping paper can’t be recycled.

Angus can often experience extreme winter conditions but our winter maintenance teams are at the ready to keep the area’s roads clear

When you snuggle down in your warm bed on a cold wintry night, spare a thought for the members of your local winter maintenance teams – out in freezing conditions, treating the roads to ease your morning journey.

Winter maintenance is a vital task affecting every sector of the community, from families making the school run, local businesses dependent on deliveries getting through and pedestrians going to the shops.

With winter well and truly upon us, Angus Council has budgeted about £1.6million to fight the battle against winter conditions on the roads.

At depots throughout the county, the winter service fleet of gritters, ploughs and snowblowers are on stand-by and maintenance crews are at the ready for the first signs of temperatures falling to critical levels.

In Forfar and Arbroath, salt stocks totalling about 14,000 tonnes have been assembled in preparation.

With 1100 miles of road in Angus, it would be unrealistic to attempt to treat all roads and footpaths at all times and priority is given to treating an agreed network of routes, which includes all busy roads.

These priority routes include important bus routes, commuter routes, roads serving hospitals, ambulance stations, fire stations, shopping centres, schools and major industrial centres.

After these priority roads are treated, attention is then given to auxiliary and non-priority carriageways and priority and non-priority footways.

Auxiliary routes cover roads which are at a higher altitude than the rest of the network and are more prone to icing, but have lighter traffic than priority routes, and are treated before the school bus runs, Monday to Friday.

Non-priority routes are only treated after priority routes. During prolonged snow conditions, priority and auxiliary routes are cleared before non-priority routes.

The council attends to public roads and footways – private roads and footways are the owners’ responsibility.
Police urge drivers to be prepared for winter

Angus residents are urged to play their part in preparing for journeys when bad weather strikes.

ALTHOUGH the council’s winter maintenance team pulls out all the stops to keep roads and footpaths clear, during very bad weather it is impossible to keep all routes open at all times, and motorists and pedestrians are urged to take this into account when venturing outside.

Inspector Gordon Milne, head of Road Policing in Angus, highlights the steps drivers should take to ensure that they are ready for winter motoring.

“Before travelling, check the weather forecast and make sure you are equipped with warm clothes, food and a torch just in case and listen to local and national radio for information on road conditions,” said Inspector Milne.

“Make sure vehicles are properly maintained and check all lamps and reflectors to ensure they are clean and in good working order. Remember to use dipped headlights instead of sidelights as this will ensure good visibility to the front of the vehicle and make the vehicle visible to other road users.

“Washer bottles should be kept topped up with screen wash and wiper blades kept in good condition. Good tyres are even more essential in wintry conditions and drivers should check them for worn tread and defects.

“Wet roads, stopping distances are at least doubled and on icy roads it can take 10 times longer to stop.”

Winter safety driving and tyre safety information leaflets are available from most police stations. For weather conditions and road closures, log on to www.nadic.com, www.ropsa.com or www.think-roadsafety.gov.uk

There are about 500 grit bins provided throughout the county for use by the public on a self-help basis and the council is appealing to local people to support its efforts if the area is gripped by snow and ice this winter.

Winter maintenance is carried out from late October to late March during the following times:

- Mon-Fri 5am-9pm
- Sat 5am-9pm
- Sun 5am-9pm
- Public holidays 5am-9pm

Responsibility for winter maintenance of the A90 Trunk road within Angus rests with the Scottish Executive and is carried out on its behalf by BEAR Scotland Limited. The A92 between Dundee and Arbroath is also looked after by BEAR on behalf of Angus Council and Dundee City Council. Both roads are given 24 hour coverage.

For information on the roads winter maintenance programme, or to request that a grit bin be filled, contact ACCESSLine on 08452 777 778.

Tackling alcohol the focus of new Project offers vital support for elderly residents

The festive period is a time for joy and celebration, but for many people in Angus and across the country, it can also be a time of potential isolation.

Often, it can seem that everyone else is having fun and it can sometimes be too easy to take comfort in alcohol. While a few drinks can produce a pleasant and relaxed feeling, excessive use of alcohol can be dangerous – and it is worth remembering that alcohol misuse and depression are common at this time of year.

The Focus on Alcohol Project is a

Giving parents a say in their child's education

ANGUS Council is meeting with parents to give information on new legislation designed to encourage more parental involvement in schools.

Following a well-attended meeting at Friockheim Primary School in October, further events are planned across the county.

The meeting was organised by Angus Council to raise awareness of the new Parental Involvement Act, which was passed by the Scottish Parliament earlier this year.

The Act will establish new parent councils in place of the current school boards and aims to encourage more parental involvement and representation in schools.

It also places new duties on local authorities to strengthen and support parents' involvement in their children's learning and in schools.

At the meeting in Friockheim, representatives from the council's Education Department met parents from across the county to discuss the new legislation and how it will be introduced locally.

Following the success of this meeting, it is planned to hold further events at individual schools over the next few months.

This will give parents an opportunity to find out more about the new rules before they are introduced in August 2007.

For further information on the new legislation contact the Director of Education's office on 01307 473235.

Forfar and Area Partnership news

OVER the past few months, the Forfar and Area Partnership have been busy with a number of activities.

These have included an antisocial behaviour workshop, an open meeting exploring how the local community can promote tourism and hospitality in the area, and the launch of a competition to design a youth shelter for young people.

Current top priorities include tackling antisocial behaviour, improving the physical appearance of Forfar, addressing tourism and accommodation issues, and improving leisure facilities for young people.

If you would like to find out how to get involved and how you can work with other local groups towards improving Forfar and the surrounding area, please contact Siobhan Fagan, community planning officer, on 01307 473775 or e-mail fagans@angus.gov.uk.

Arbroath & Area Partnership news

THE Arbroath & Area Partnership has been working hard developing its priorities, including the introduction of an Angus Credit Union and a community cinema.

Financial and in-kind support has been found to launch the credit union and a development worker post has been advertised.

A feasibility study and consultation exercise is now well under way to look at the scope for a community cinema in the Arbroath area.

An interim update on progress has been prepared and the final report is expected before the end of the year.

For more information on any of these items, please contact Debbie Gowans, community regeneration officer on 01241 436872.

A new initiative in Angus that aims to tackle alcohol misuse in the county. One of the key aims will be to support older people to think about their attitudes and behaviour towards alcohol, both positively and negatively.

Project manager Eileen McArthur said: “Even modest use of alcohol in older people can have a significant impact on health and general wellbeing. “This problem nationally is generally hidden and unacknowledged.”

Most older people do not drink excessively, but given the physiological and lifestyle changes (for example, losing a loved one) that happen with ageing, tolerance levels to alcohol are reduced and hence harm is greatly increased.

Eileen advises: “A sensible approach to alcohol is best considered – or as many older, wiser people might say, ‘everything is good in moderation’.”

The Focus on Alcohol project is a countywide project. It will develop around issues of safety within the community, the improvement of health and education to inform the positive, social use of alcohol. For further information, contact Eileen and the Angus Drug and Alcohol Action team on 01307 474899.

ANGUS Council is seeking the views of the Arbroath community on the regeneration of the former Seaforth Hotel site.

Draft development guidelines for the prominent site have been produced by the council and are now the subject of consultation with local people.

All comments will be reported to a future meeting of the council’s Infrastructure Services Committees before the guidelines are finalised.

Copies of the draft guidelines are available to view during normal working hours at Arbroath Library and Planning and Transport, St James House, Forfar.

Alternatively, a copy of the committee report can be viewed and comments submitted via the council’s website at www.angus.gov.uk/seaforth

The deadline for comment is 7 December.

Dig deep at the Angus Archives

A VISIT to Angus Archives is a unique experience. The archives are located in a lovely rural setting, adjacent to the 12th-century ruined Restenneth Priory, above.

Angus Archives contain a vast storehouse of fascinating information, including burgh minute books, pirate attacks, death warrants, house plans, letters, Edwardian diaries, Georgian recipes, Victorian valentines, wills, property records, photographs from all over Angus, trade records of weavers, shoemakers and tailors, letters from soldiers and sailors and so much more.

In addition, they hold an extensive local history book collection, a large Angus-wide photographic collection and major genealogical sources such as the International Genealogical Index, the census and the Old Parish Registers of all Angus parishes, valuation roll collection and a variety of databases.

At Angus Archives, you will be able to use:

• original documents
• an extensive collection of local history books
• an Angus-wide collection of photographs
• our extensive collection of research files
• get advice on sources and their locations
• obtain photocopies of books and documents
• use transcripts and indexes of original material
• use the internet to access family history websites
• use your laptop.

Examination of all resources in the search room is free, but charges apply for photocopying, photographic reproductions and the commissioned research service.

If you are worried about your alcohol consumption, visit your GP, contact Tayside Council on Alcohol on 01382 223965 or Drinkline on 0800 9178282. Walkway to Barrie’s birthplace

KIRRIEMUIR and the Glens Partnership is appealing for input from local people to help it achieve its aims for the area.

The partnership has been discussing plans to create and maintain a historic walkway between J M Barrie’s birthplace and his grave at Kirriemuir Cemetery, and investigating ways to support the Kirriemuir Youth Project.

The partnership is urging local people to come forward with new ideas and support to enable it to achieve its aims and take current and future projects forward.

Carers needed

CAN you complete the family picture for the growing number of children in Angus who need carers?

For one reason or another, some children can no longer live with their own families and, as a result, need either temporary or permanent care.

Angus Council works closely with about 60 families who currently look after children in the authority’s care, but would like to hear from anyone interested in finding out more about becoming a foster carer.

Anyone interested in fostering or adoption can also call the family placement team for an informal chat on 01241 435078.

THE POPULAR ANGUS BOOK AWARD IS HELPING CHILDREN REALISE THEIR POTENTIAL

From babies to teenagers – all children and young people in Angus are encouraged to realise their potential through books and reading. A variety of events are held throughout the county to promote enjoyment of reading and a lifelong love of books.

Angus Book Award

Angus was the first authority in Scotland to launch a book award specifically aimed at teenagers. Since its inception in 1996, the Angus Book Award has proved a huge success with pupils, authors and publishers.

The 2007 award will be launched on 8 December with the shortlisted titles available in local libraries and the winner announced in May. As in previous years, this annual event is sure to receive an enthusiastic response from third-year pupils who read the short-listed titles and vote for their favourite.

The award was launched by Angus Council to encourage pupils to enjoy quality teenage fiction. It is based on pupils not only voting for the winner, but also actively participating in all aspects of the award, from the selection of the short list to the prize ceremony. It is now one of the most highly regarded regional book awards.

The short list is selected by teachers, librarians and pupils, and reflects the range of themes that interest teenagers while challenging both committed and less enthusiastic readers.

The books are read and discussed in detail, culminating in a secret ballot by pupils to select the winner. As part of the short-listing process, authors agree to visit schools and attend the award ceremony – which is run entirely by young people themselves.

Lindsey Fraser, national co-ordinator of the Scottish Executive Home Reading Initiative, said: “The Angus Book Award has been a ground-breaking initiative.

“This superb initiative by the educational resources service gives young readers a voice in a way no other award has previously done and writers who have the good fortune to win a coveted place on the short list are assured of considered, intelligent feedback direct from their readers.

“This award has been replicated throughout the UK, but Angus remains an accolade to which writers aspire because of the accompanying programme and the integrity with which the initiative is delivered.”

AUTHOR Graham Joyce won the 2006 Angus Book Award for his novel TWOC – a hard-hitting fast-paced novel which takes a step into the world of teenage joyriding.

In his online blog, Graham describes the excitement of the awards ceremony.

“TWOC was short-listed and the jurors were several hundred teenagers, all of whom commanded full voting power and who attended the award ceremony to cheer, stamp

Which Writer Wins

It’s not just secondary school pupils in Angus who get the opportunity to read and take part in a vote for their favourite author – younger readers also have the chance to have their top titles recognised.

Which Writer Wins? is an annual event to encourage reading for enjoyment and takes place in primary schools across Angus. Presentations to acknowledge the results within each cluster take place in libraries with pupil and staff representatives from each class and school that takes part.

At each event, pupils speak about which authors they have enjoyed reading and give entertaining reviews of some of the titles. This year, the author who polled most votes was Michael Morpurgo. Each year the event builds on the success of initiatives such as the Summer Reading Scheme and Chatterbooks reading groups and has an impact on borrowing at local libraries, with pupils avidly reading titles by featured authors.

You’re never too young to discover the joys of reading

EVEN Angus babies are encouraged to develop a lifelong love of books and reading.

Through the national Bookstart programme, a variety of activities for pre-schoolers are organised in libraries.

Angus Bookstart co-ordinator Sylvia Main said: “We believe that children are never too young to start loving books.

“Sharing books with babies and toddlers is a wonderful way to increase language skills and help them understand the world around them.

“Parents are their children’s most important teachers, shaping the way they learn. The intimacy of book sharing can strengthen bonding between parent and child.”

Research also shows that babies and toddlers who love books begin reading sooner and go on to fare better at school, in all areas of the curriculum.”

Activities for pre-school children at Angus libraries include Tickle Toes sessions, sponsored by Bookstart, where babies and toddlers can enjoy songs, rhymes and stories.

Living in this part of Scotland means you don’t need reminding about cold weather! Because of the Angus climate, it’s essential to stay warm and comfortable during the winter months.

With the cost of fuel rising all the time, it’s important you use energy as efficiently as possible. Not only will you save money, you’ll also help reduce carbon emissions, a major contributor to climate change.

You can save money at no cost by simply doing things differently (see our top tips), or you can make improvements to your home. There are grants available to help you with the cost of these.

To lead the way, Angus Council has been making substantial improvements to the energy efficiency and amenities of the 8000 council houses in the area, which are now among the highest quality council housing stock in the country.

When improvements were originally planned, it was the energy aspects of the houses which took priority: cavities and lofts were insulated, windows and doors were double glazed and central heating was installed to all 8000 houses, including condensing boilers, the most efficient type.

This has made a huge difference to couples such as Forfar residents Lindsay and Kathleen Gray, above, who have had their boiler replaced with a more efficient one and can now heat their home comfortably at a reasonable cost.

The council has also installed 36 solar water heating systems in Arbroath and is investigating the use of other domestic renewable energy systems. Even when other general amenity improvements are carried out, such as kitchen replacements or rewiring, tenants receive low-energy light bulbs to help them reduce costs.

The Scottish Executive has also recognised the importance of energy efficiency and fuel poverty. They have two important grants available:

- Scottish Executive Central Heating Programme (not applicable to council housing) provides grants for over-60s living in private sector housing. This provides a non means-tested central heating and insulation package, managed by Scottish Gas.
- The Warm Deal, managed by Scottish Gas, provides insulation grants of up to £500 if you own or rent your home and are on qualifying benefits. It covers cavity and loft insulation, water tank and pipe insulation, and draught proofing.

Fuel utility companies also have an obligation to provide help with energy efficiency. Even if you don’t qualify for the grants above, you can still get insulation measures carried out at a subsidised rate.

So what can you do to reduce the use of energy in your home? It’s very simple – the less energy you use, the less it will cost. The complicated bit is how to decide what’s best for you and how to pay for any improvements.

For information on insulation grants, renewable technology, changing your supplier and the best way to pay your fuel bills, contact Angus Council’s home energy management officer on 01307 474787 or e-mail smithja@angus.gov.uk.

Cutting back on soaring energy costs can be difficult but we’re here to help

Top Tips

- Don’t leave televisions on stand-by
- Switch off lights when rooms are not in use
- Close your curtains at dusk to save heat
- If you have central heating, turning the thermostat down by one degree can cut 10 per cent off your fuel bills
- Shower instead of taking a bath
- When boiling a kettle, only use the water you need
- When using the washing machine, try to ensure it is full
- Try to hang washing outside rather than using a tumble dryer
- Defrost fridges and freezers regularly
- Only switch your hot water tank on for the hours that you need it.
- If you have storage heaters, remember to close the output dial before you go to bed, or if you go out during the day.
- If you have gas heating, don’t use your immersion to heat your water.

Glamis’ China connection…

Each year, the person or organisation who has made an outstanding contribution to the county is recognised with the top accolade of Angus Ambassador of the Year. This coveted title goes only to those who epitomise the spirit and passion of Angus, raising awareness of the county’s strengths and opportunities at home or abroad.

In 2005, the award, sponsored by the Royal Bank of Scotland, went to Glamis Castle. Since receiving the accolade, Glamis has been working harder than ever to raise its profile and that of Angus on an international stage.

This culminated recently in the signing of a partnership agreement between Glamis Castle and the Great Wall of China. David Adams, general manager Glamis Castle, explained: “Within the next five years, China could well be sending a quarter of a million visitors to this country. “This is a market that we must tap into and one of the ways we decided to do this was by exploring a twinning arrangement with a historic site in China – and what better than the Great Wall!”

Glamis was able to build on the relationships forged in China by previous trade delegations led by the council. “One thing we have learned is that to do business in China, it is important to build relationships and the work that has been done by Angus Council in this respect has certainly helped pave the way,” said David.

The agreement will see Glamis and the Great Wall administrators undertake joint marketing via avenues such as website links, exchanging advice and information, conservation matters and staff exchanges. Glamis has also signed a partnership agreement with the Penglai Pavilion, a fortified temple overlooking the China Sea. With its 1000-year history and myths and mysteries, the pavilion is a natural partner for Glamis Castle. David added: “The only other similar arrangements the Great Wall Society has are with the pyramids in Egypt, the fjords in Norway and Le Cinque Terre – a stretch of coastline in northern Italy with five little villages built into the rocks.”

“For Glamis and Angus to be honoured in this way is a tribute to the passion, commitment and innovation of the people in the county. It is a great example of Angus blazing a trail.”
